In this renovation, the challenge was to create a full-length range hood to coordinate with the white, Italian, high-gloss lacquer cabinetry. After careful consideration of design intent, upkeep, and the overall size of the range, a glass front was selected. By using glass, it was possible to make one continuous hood, from wall to wall, without the use of any joints. The glossiness of the hood is a nice complement to the equally glossy cabinets; coupled with white walls, it creates a soft picture frame for the tiled mural backsplash.
